

Testing explanation

In order to complete testing throughout the Bookaroo application we have utilised Java unit testing and manual acceptance testing. Each service (excluding those that deal with discovery) have unit testing for the controller, service and repository. These can be run by running the class within each of the files, the results of which can be found in the folders of this file.

Path for tests are as follows

Project File -> src -> main -> test -> java

Microservices that do not map to a database entity are not unit tested due to unpredictability and lack of support from Spring framework.
